GUIDANCE NOTES FOR ASSESSORS GIVING FEEDBACK

When should feedback be given?

Once the task has been completed, at an agreed time and place, with the assessor prepared.

What makes feedback useful?

It is fair, specific to the work that was done, and says what can be done to meet the standard where it has not yet been met. It ends with what the candidate should do next.

Supporting the candidate

Encourage candidates to judge their own work against the standard, help them see how day-to-day jobs can be used as evidence, and adapt the level of support to each person.
